‘Politicized’

Dear Editor:

Kudos to Jennifer Fumiko Cahill, Thadeus Greenson and Kimberly Wear for an extremely intelligent and well written editorial (“Across Dueling Realities,” July 15) on the vaccine situation.

It’s important to remember that when the country encountered a smallpox problem, medical science solved it. When the country encountered a measles problem, medical science solved it. When the country encountered a polio problem, medical science solved it.

Why is the COVID-19 problem different? The answer is because it has become politicized. The MAGAs and the Q-Anons have decided that if the solution is promoted by Democrats then it must be wrong. Amazing. Absolutely no intelligent thinking going on here.

An incredible number of Americans have decided to drink the Kool-Aid of a demented and delusional leader. To add to the incredible situation, they seem to not realize that the greatest con man in our history has had his two shots. Where is the logic here?

It’s equally important to remember that Trump lost the election by 7 million votes — 7 million.

If his followers want to endanger themselves and their families, it’s sad that there is little that can be done.

of us lined up in the dark, cold Mad River Community Hospital parking lot. A nurse announced: “We think we should have enough for everyone.” Biden had just been elected. We were going to be OK.

Seven months later, we are teetering on a terrifying precipice. We could be remembered as the generation that had enough vaccine to stop a pandemic — if we had been vaccinated.

Last week an old friend invited my family to visit her home in Kauai. When I asked if she had been vaccinated, she became indignant: “Do you realize that two people died from that vaccine?” I pointed out that more than 4 million people have died from COVID-19, so far. So much for the Kauai trip.

Yes, we need perseverance, compassion and eventually a “ripple effect.” From your mouth to God’s ear, Ms. Cahill, because while we finesse the debate, the virus is mutating.

Boulders for the South Jetty - Circa 1895

For years rock was quarried far up on Jacoby Creek, brought by train down to the bay, and hauled on barges to this receiving apron at the north end of the South Spit. The barge was brought up next to the apron, where 21 small cars filled with rock were then pulled onto the apron by a small locomotive, which then hauled them westward along the tracks to be dumped at the end of the jetty. The quarried boulders were battered by the waves at the mouth of the bay and failed to stay in place, but for years the little locomotive continued its futile work as the landing apron welcomed load after load of useless rock.

Newsom Implements New Testing, Vaccine Mandate

New Rule will effect thousands on North Coast, but full impact unclear

By Ana B. Ibarra/CalMatters

newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

Amid an uptick in COVID-19 cases and hospitalizations, California Gov. Gavin Newsom announced July 26 that health care workers and state employees must be vaccinated or undergo weekly testing and wear masks.

Employees of hospitals, nursing homes, dentists' and doctors' offices and other health care settings will have to comply with the requirements by Aug. 23. In addition, all employees of state agencies will be subjected to a verification process that will be mostly in place by Aug. 2, according to state officials.

Exactly what the new policy means for vaccination efforts in Humboldt County — where about 55 percent of the population is vaccinated and thousands of residents are employed by the state and local healthcare providers — remains unclear.

Tory Starr, executive officer of Open Door Community Health Centers, Humboldt County's largest healthcare provider, said in an email to the Journal that 87 percent of staff is already vaccinated and vaccination is required for all new hires.

"We recognize that the best preventative measure to ensure patient and staff safety is to be vaccinated," Starr wrote. "At some point in the near future we will require staff to be vaccinated as a condition of employment unless a valid health or religious exemption exists."

Attempts to reach St. Joseph Health,

Humboldt County's second largest provider, for comment were not successful by deadline.

Short of a vaccination mandate, the new policy comes as the Delta variant has become the dominant strain in California — approximately 80 percent of the COVID-19 cases sequenced were of the Delta type, according to the state. Experts say the Delta variant is highly contagious and poses a serious threat to unvaccinated people.

More than 3,000 people infected with COVID-19 were hospitalized in California — including 16 in Humboldt County — as of July 27, which is comparable to late October 2020, before the vaccine was available.

"We are at a point in this pandemic where individuals' choice to not get vaccinated is now impacting the rest of us in a profound, devastating and deadly way," Newsom said during his announcement.

The California Hospital Association voiced strong support for the governor's order, calling the requirements "important and necessary steps that must be taken in this extraordinary situation."

But one of the state's largest health care unions declined to comment directly on the new policy. The union prefers "education and outreach" over mandatory vaccination or testing, said Renee Saldana, press secretary for SEIU-UHW, which represents about 100,000 California health care workers, including certified nursing assistants, respiratory therapists, hospital cooks and janitors.

Saldana also declined to comment on what the union would do if health care providers require mandatory vaccinations for workers, as some hospital systems have done.

The American Medical Association and the American Nurses Association, along with about 60 other medical groups, signed a joint statement July 26 calling for the mandatory vaccination of health care workers. And the Veterans Affairs Administration said it would require COVID-19 vaccinations for some of its workers, including doctors and nurses. It is the first federal agency to do so.

Assemblymember Buffy Wicks, an Oakland Democrat, said she is exploring legislation to clarify that employers can mandate that their workers get shots. Experts say it's a tough ask, but not impossible or illegal. Employers can require vaccines, but cannot discriminate against people who aren't vaccinated because of a disability or religion, according to the state's Department of Fair Employment and Housing.

Wicks said she's heard from small businesses owners who are interested in mandating vaccines among their employees but are afraid of being sued.

"Beyond legislation, I think what we need is a cultural shift around this idea of proof of vaccination," Wicks said. "Our education leaders, our religious leaders, they should say, 'we're going to require this'... same thing with gyms, that's an obvious place we should be doing it."

California eliminated its colored-tier system for businesses when it reopened on June 15. An analysis by the San Francisco Chronicle estimated that about a dozen counties — including Humboldt — would be in the most restrictive "purple" tier if those rules still applied.

"The idea that we would be in a purple tier, which means schools and indoor dining would be closed, to me that was very alarming, it was a wake up call," Wicks said. "We need to consider further measures to ensure people are getting vaccinated."

Shira Shafir, an epidemiology professor at UCLA, said from a public health perspective, it is extremely valuable for employers to require their workers to get vaccinated.

"Given the risk of transmission, it is really important to use all public health prevention measures we have at our disposal," she said. "Vaccines protect against the Delta variant, but they only work if people get them."

Requiring — or in the case of the state, strongly encouraging — health workers to get vaccinated helps protect people who are immunocompromised or older because even if vaccinated, their bodies may not be able to build strong protection, Shafir said. It also helps protect children under 12 who cannot yet be vaccinated.

About 5.3 percent of all COVID-19 tests are coming back positive as of today; about six weeks ago, the state reopened its economy with a positivity rate under 1 percent. (Humboldt County, meanwhile, had recorded a 12.2 percent test-positivity rate over the seven-day period before this edition of the Journal went to press.)

Conversations around stricter vaccination policies and mandates in the workplace have been gaining traction in California. At least two Bay Area counties, San Francisco and Santa Clara, had already announced plans to require vaccination among county workers. San Francisco is also requiring that workers in high-risk settings including hospitals, nursing homes and jails, be vaccinated by Sept. 15.

Last week, three public health officials in the Bay Area announced their support for private employers to also require vaccination among their workers. In Humboldt County, Health Officer Ian Hoffman has said it is something that could move the needle on vaccination rates locally, though he's stopped short of openly advocating for such requirements.

Another large employer, the University of California system, including UC Health hospitals and clinics, recently finalized its vaccination policy, which will require that students, staff and faculty be fully vaccinated before the start of fall classes or by Sept. 1 for those not on an academic calendar. ●

Public Health Again Urges Masking

Humboldt County Public Health is recommending that everyone once again mask up in public, indoor spaces amid a rise in spread of the Delta variant.

Humboldt now joins 25 other California counties in making the recommendation, while Los Angeles County has gone a step further and re-imposed its mask mandate as it faces renewed concerns about hospital capacity.

Locally, Humboldt County is in the midst of its worst period of virus spread since the post-holiday surge in January amid a surge in cases attributed to the more contagious Delta variant. As the Journal went to press, the county had confirmed 192 cases with a test-positivity rate of 12.7 percent — both among the worst in the state. Further, the county reported July 26 that of the 193 cases confirmed over the prior seven days, 24 were in children under the age of 10 while four of nine hospitalizations over the same span were of people age 60 or younger.

Humboldt County implemented an order mandating the wearing of facial coverings in public indoor spaces or outdoors in situations in which social distancing was not possible back in April of 2020, before the state followed suit, but lifted the mandate along with the rest of the state last month.

The press release announcing the masking recommendation describes it as “an extra precautionary measure” for those who are fully vaccinated, one that also “ensures easy verification that all unvaccinated people are masked in those settings,” as is still required by the state.

“We still have many unvaccinated people in our community who are vulnerable to serious illness from this virus,” Health Director Sofia Pereira said in a press release, referring to the 45 percent of local residents who remain unvaccinated. “Masking is a reasonable precaution we can all take in light of our recent case rate increase and the rise of the Delta variant.”

The county’s press release also encourages businesses to adopt universal masking practices for customers in indoor areas.

“We’ve all sacrificed to get to a point where vaccine is widely available, and our

The Advocate

Remembering Charlie Bean and his tireless work to bring access and independence to all

By Thadeus Greenson
thad@northcoastjournal.com

California has lost one of its fiercest and kindest advocates.

Charles L. Bean Jr., who took a life-changing accident that left him quadriplegic as a young man and turned it into a relentless mission to make the world a more equitable, accessible place for all, using his soft, firm voice and kind smile to improve the lives of people with disabilities, died in his home the evening of July 16, with his wife, Carolyn Bean, by his side. He was 64.

“The people he was advocating for saw themselves in him and vice-versa, and that’s a really beautiful thing,” says Cindy Calderon, who worked alongside Bean and came to consider him a dear friend. “He just had this way about him. He always liked people, was always kind and liked to laugh. And he just wanted things to work.”

A Yurok Tribal member born Sept. 12, 1956, Bean grew up in the Hoopa area, getting his first job at the Hoopa grocery store at the age of 17 and graduating from Hoopa Valley High School in 1974. Shortly thereafter, he enlisted in the U.S. Army but his service was cut short in 1975 when a motorcycle accident severed his spinal cord.

But Bean would soon become determined not to let his wheelchair define him or even slow him down. Humboldt County Public Works Director Tom Mattson chuckles, recalling how decades later he would regularly find himself yelling at Bean to slow down as he zoomed through one of Old Town Eureka’s many alleyways in his motorized wheelchair, which bore a sticker on the back reading, “Does this wheelchair make my butt look big?” well beyond the posted speed limit of 15 mph.

“Man, he could make that thing fly,” Mattson says.

Shortly after the accident, Bean committed himself to his studies and received an associates degree in accounting from College of the Redwoods, which he turned into a career in finance and consulting with the United States Forest Service, as well as a 10-year stay in China, where he taught English and adopted his daughter Bien Hou. In his younger years, Bean would wheel his manual chair from his Eureka home over the Samoa Bridge and along State Route 255 to visit the bars in Arcata. In 2016, he told the Journal that the “trip back sobered you right up.” Some years later, he and his brother Kenny wheeled from Blue Lake to Willow Creek to raise awareness of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990.

Ultimately, making sure America lived up to the promise of the act would become an all-consuming mission for Bean, one he approached with passion, wit and — most of all — kindness.

Mattson says he first met Bean shortly after being tapped to direct the public works department in 2007. The county was woefully behind in bringing its facilities, programs and services into compliance with ADA mandates — so much so it would enter into a settlement agreement with the United States Department of Justice in 2008, pledging to make a host of required upgrades, a pledge the county has yet to fully make good on. Bean's relationship with Public Works easily could have been a confrontational one, Mattson said, but it never was.

"Charlie was just always looking at, 'How can we improve? How can we do better? How can I help you do better?'" Mattson says. "He was very persistent, though, saying, 'You have to fix this.' But then he'd ask, 'How can I help you?'"

Mattson pauses. "He was a staunch advocate but also a strong, willing partner," he says.

It was that spirit of partnership that saw Bean testify in favor of county funding requests, advocate for its efforts and consult with county staff.

In February of 2013, Bean even put on a training for Public Works staff with one of his old manual wheelchairs, giving them a first-hand insight into the experiences of those with disabilities trying to navigate public facilities. According to staff, the experience pushed the county to not just meet minimum accessibility standards, but to exceed them and improve access wherever possible by minimizing slopes, planning for wider areas between obstacles and increasing visibility from all angles.

"It changed our way of looking at things," Mattson says of the training. "He was the kind of person that could do that, take people and change the way they saw the world."

For his part, Bean told the Journal in 2016 that so much of his work was simply about making sure those making decisions hear from the people — all of them — who will be impacted.

"People tell me all the time, 'I made this for you,'" he said at the time of various paths and ramps designed to be ADA accessible. "And I say, 'You did? Why didn't you ask me what I needed? Stop looking at the chair, look at the people.'"

Bean had a relentlessly persistent — even stubborn — way about him. The county's public works building has two entries, Mattson recalls, explaining that one allows wheelchair access directly to his office while the route through the other is blocked by stairs. Bean, he said, always wound up at the bottom of those stairs when he'd come to visit Mattson and would call out for the director's attention. After several visits, Mattson says he asked Bean why he always chose that route into the building when he knew there was another.

"He said, 'Because when I get to the stairs, I can yell at you and you come,'" Mattson recalls with a laugh, quickly adding that it was Bean's way of constantly reminding Mattson of the barriers facing those who depend on a chair for access. "He's just the kind of guy who made this a better community to live in. He was just dedicated to what he was doing and he was always in a good mood."

While Bean's seemingly unflappable mood is a hallmark in the memories of those who knew him well, it was born in his desire to help people and make change. In a 2016 interview with the Journal, Bean said he would wake up depressed in the mornings but shake it off by remembering how much work there was left to do.

Calderon, who vividly remembers first meeting Bean back in 2006, when he rolled into a local transportation conference with a Pepsi in hand and "another Pepsi for later in his knapsack," says she knew he was often struggling through a series of health issues that had plagued him since that motorcycle accident.

"I watched him work so many times in pain," she says. "He didn't say he was in pain or show it, but I could tell. But he just had this way about him. He always liked people."

And it was the people — the clients and consumers of the various advocacy agencies he worked for over the years — that drove him, Calderon says. She adds that when she and Bean worked together in the advocacy department of Tri-County Independent Living, Bean would often zip down the hall when someone showed up with an issue.

"Even though it wasn't his job, he would oftentimes be the first one to go out to the lobby to greet a consumer," she says. "He was just interested in people."

And that's what ultimately made Bean special, Calderon says, as he worked his way up the California In-home Supportive Services Consumer Alliance (CICA), a statewide collaboration of officials tasked with implementing and improving the program that provides in-home care to those with disabilities, ultimately becoming the northern region's executive director. As its only paid employee, Bean served as the point person in overseeing operations in more than 30 member counties every year.

"He was so organized and hyper-focused," Calderon recalls. "He was the consummate advocate. He related to people. That was one thing about him — he always tried to see both sides, whereas I, as an advocate, was more bullheaded."

But while Bean was quick to build bridges and consensus where possible, his focus never wavered from those he advocated for, the people looking for help navigating public spaces or staying in their private homes. When the state's IHHS program came into political crosshairs in the early 2010s due to fraud allegations, prompting the state to introduce unannounced home compliance checks, Calderon says recipients were terrified. But Bean was upfront and direct with them, she says, and wrangled a high-ranking state official onto a conference call with them to make sure "they could actually ask questions of people at the top."

Lisa Marie Leon, the transition coordinator at Tri-County Independent Living, says Bean was simply the perfect person for the role.

"He was the right person to do it because he was living it, and he was able to share his passion, share his strengths, share the weaknesses and work for change," she says. "He lived his life to the fullest with passion and purpose, and he cared about people with disabilities and definitely made a change in their lives."

Evidence of Bean's work is everywhere in the community, she says, pointing to the lower help desk in the county human resources department, the bus schedules posted just a bit lower to the ground so they're readable for those in wheelchairs, the handrails installed at the courthouse and the raised platform in the Humboldt County Board of Supervisors chamber, which allows everyone — even those in wheelchairs — to approach the podium, look their representatives in the eye and have their voices heard because "everyone is equal, everyone has right to participate."

But Leon says it was Bean's passion for people that struck her the first day they met at Tri-County Independent Living.

"I just fell in love with him the day I met him," she says. "I loved him immediately. He always has a smile on his face, always has a positive attitude and is in good spirits. Always willing to help. He just has a huge heart."

And those close to Bean have countless examples of that big heart in action — from the cookies he'd bring into the office to the gifts he'd give co-workers and their kids; gifts for Christmas, birthdays and even Valentine's Day. But Leon and others say Bean's bulging heart was perhaps most apparent in his work. Leon points to a "Roll and Stroll" event in late 2018 designed to raise money for accessibility improvements at Sequoia Park, where Bean would later consult on making sure the recently opened Redwood Sky Walk would be not only accessible, but user-friendly. Bean worked hard coordinating the 2018 fundraiser but was hospitalized shortly before the event. Leon says an undaunted Bean convinced his doctors to discharge him so he could attend the event, pledging to return immediately after to be re-admitted.

"That's how strong his passion was," she says. "He was just an incredible man."

A memorial for Bean will be held at Eureka's First Presbyterian Church at 1 p.m. on Aug. 7, and all who knew him are welcome to attend. His family asks that donations of flowers be sent to the church in advance of the service, and donations in his honor can be made to CICA (181 Anne Way, Los Gatos, CA 95032). In a brief statement to the Journal, Carolyn Bean, Charlie's wife and caretaker under the IHHS program he fought to protect and expand, says her husband was the love of her life and will be dearly missed by all who knew him.

In his final years, though many didn't know it, Bean had been in and out of the hospital and undergone numerous surgeries and procedures. When the end came, it seems fitting he was at home, receiving care through a program he'd fought tirelessly to expand and protect for years.

"He was larger than life," Calderon says, adding that Bean's impact stretched well beyond Humboldt County, to thousands of advocates and people living with disabilities — people like him — throughout the state. "He was always hyper-focused on the issues he cared about. And he cared about the right to remain at home and not be warehoused in a skilled nursing facility."

Tomato and Egg Stir-fry

And the miracle of the ordinary

By Wendy Chan

onthetable@northcoastjournal.com

When my editor suggested I write about the tomato and egg stir-fry dish I'd posted on social media, I thought, "There aren't any unique stories (or secrets) behind this iconic dish." Although this is a dish that's popular across China, it's simple and almost too plain to talk about. Then I thought about how life is often ordinary and monotonous. Many of us repeat day after day the motions of caring for our children and family, going to work and coming home. We are humble like the tomato and egg dish, but find comfort and happiness in our ordinary life.

Anyone can cook this 10-minute dish, and there are many ways and different recipes to make it. The taste is different depending on what region the maker of the dish is from: some are sweeter, some are tarter, some have a brighter color and some are paler. I thought I had nailed it for years, as my family has attested. However, after I tested and combined elements from other versions, this is my new favorite recipe. The soul of this tasty dish is the sweet summer tomatoes and fresh backyard eggs. The secrets (maybe there are secrets!) are scalding off the tomato skins, adding a little cornstarch to the eggs and tossing in freshly minced garlic at the last minute before serving. The silky eggs, the aromatic garlic, and the sweet and tangy tomato make this a classic dish that stands the test of time.

Tomato and Egg Stir-fry

Be sure to make extra rice to go with this dish. Serves 3 to 4.

3 large summer ripe tomatoes
1 tablespoon cornstarch

Homey eggs and tomatoes hit all the buttons: sweet, salty, tangy and creamy.

1 tablespoon water
4 farm fresh eggs
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 shallots, chopped
4 thin slices ginger
2 tablespoons brown sugar
¼ cup ketchup
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon minced garlic
2 scallions, sliced

Bring a medium pot of water to boil. Cut a shallow cross on the bottom of each tomato. Blanch the tomatoes in the boiling water for one minute. Take the tomatoes out and peel the skins off. Chop each tomato into 1-inch chunks and set aside.

Mix the cornstarch with the tablespoon of water and set aside. In a medium bowl, beat the eggs, add the cornstarch and water mixture, and mix well.

Heat a wok or a pan over medium-high heat and add 1 tablespoon oil. When the oil is hot, moving quickly when the pan is swirled, add the egg mixture. Scramble until the eggs are just cooked, about 1 minute. The eggs should be soft and fluffy. Pour them back to the same bowl and set aside.

Using the same pan over high heat, add the remaining tablespoon of oil. Add the shallots and ginger, and sauté until fragrant. Add the tomatoes and stir fry them for 3-4 minutes or until the tomatoes become soft. Stir in the sugar, ketchup and salt, and cook for 2 minutes. Then add the eggs and soy sauce before finally adding the garlic. Yes, add the garlic last! Toss and mix until all ingredients are combined. Turn off the heat, adjust the seasoning to your taste — this dish should taste sweet, sour and lightly salty — and garnish with scallions. Served with steamed rice or ramen noodles.

Quick and Wordy

The Compleat Wrks of Wllm Shkspre (Abridged) (Revised)

By Pat Bitton

frontrow@northcoastjournal.com

The Compleat Wrks of Wllm Shkspre (Abridged) (Revised) — hereinafter referred to as CWWS for the sake of my fingers — was assembled by Adam Long, Daniel Singer and Jess Winfield in the early 1980s. While it did make a nine-year detour to legitimate theater in London, CWWS has lived largely on the edge of legitimacy.

That edginess is key because there are few rules for how the piece is produced and performed. The actors (only three for the 37 plays and 1,122 parts) use their real names and create their own interpretations of the characters. Improvisation is key and local/topical references are freely incorporated. All of which makes CWWS an ideal vehicle for Dell'Arte MFA graduates Kathryn Cesarz (2019) and Oscar Nava (2021), and current Humboldt State University theater student AJ Hempstead.

Nava opens the performance with the newly traditional land acknowledgement and Hempstead, in the guise of a Shakespearean scholar, invites the audience to share their knowledge of Shakespeare's works, only to discover that there's a distinct possibility they know more than he does. Brushing this minor problem aside, he proceeds to welcome us to a world in which married men wear black tights with pride and the Complete Works should be in every hotel room. Eager student Cesarz then reads aloud the results of her Google search into the life of Shakespeare, which unaccountably morphs into Hitler's invasion of Eastern Europe and his mistress Eva Peron. Clearly, it's time for tonight's lesson to commence.

The first play tackled is Romeo and Juliet, in which there is much emoting, some creative wig-switching, a little swordplay, a mishap with the nurse's "breasts," the first instance of Cesarz's key motif for the evening — fake projectile vomiting over the audience — and, of course, death. This all takes far too long (12 minutes), so in the interest of time, Titus Andronicus is reduced to a brief but bloody cooking show with a pile of brains topped with googly eyes passed around the audience.

Then it's on to Othello, introduced by Cesarz bedecked in a necklace of plastic boats (she Googled "moor"). Nava explains the true meaning of the word in this context and invites Hempstead to play Othello, as he is a Black actor. Cesarz then feels obliged to represent the Italian side of the Moorish heritage, which somehow leads to an inordinate number of groan-worthy penis jokes.

Meanwhile, time is passing rapidly and the comedies must be tackled in bulk. The 16 plays are all built on five basic ideas, so why not merge them all into a single play? Now presenting: Four Weddings and a Transvestite. As a result, Cesarz frequently forgets whether she's supposed to be a boy or a girl, while Nava has a lot of fun with a bloody hand, but the plays are all covered in five minutes.

Next, it's off to Scotland for the play that cannot be named, featuring a golfing Macbeth, a red-headed, manic Lady M., and an oversized golf ball masquerading as a decapitated head. Murder leads us seamlessly to Julius Caesar and, logically, on to Antony and Cleopatra (and more projectile vomiting — thank you, asp). After a brief detour into the Apocrypha (the "bad plays"), the histories get the bulk treatment in the guise of a football game, complete with commentators, referees and cheerleaders. Everyone agrees to skip Coriolanus because of the name but they remember they've missed "the big one" — Hamlet (the serious version of which, (co)incidentally, opens at NCRT on July 31). Cesarz, however, has other ideas and refuses to participate, resulting a bravura one-act, one-man performance from Nava.

After the intermission and a brief detour into the sonnets, relative sanity is restored, and a "proper" production of Hamlet can begin. Hempstead channels the prince, resplendent in black velvet and a wig that hovers somewhere between Elvis and James Brown, while Nava milks the feebleness of old Polonius for all it's worth, and Cesarz delves into Ophelia's ego, superego and id with a little help from the audience. Thanks to the poisoned goblet, she gets in one more projectile vomit and the performance wraps up with several increasingly frenetic attempts to do Hamlet in the shortest possible time to meet the deadline.

NCRT's simple stage design brings in the essential elements of any Shakespearean production: an ancient castle, a staircase to a tower, a grave, a large crucifix, stone steps and many doorways to handle all the necessary comings and goings. Plus, of course, a lectern with a reference copy of the real Complete Works — all 6 pounds of it — and a cardboard cut-out bard.

The cast riff and scramble through Shakespeare's assembled works with impressive energy and verbal and physical agility — I was quite exhausted just watching them. And now you can learn everything you need to know about Shakespeare's life work with a lot of fun and for under $20 — plus there are no homework assignments! ●

NCJ GET OUT

Sea to Summit: Signal Peak

By Hollie Ernest

getout@northcoastjournal.com

My planning for Signal Peak began with, "Where is this?" I had never heard of Signal Peak before. It's to the southwest of Black Lassic, sort of behind it as you approach from the northwest. There are several routes, all of them challenging. I didn't want to go alone, but wasn't sure who else might be up for this masochistic quest. It would take two days, totaling right at 100 miles but with about 15,000 feet of climbing. Packing our own gear (bikepacking) would also be required. It being July, with most of the route remote and inland, water would also be a challenge.

The only person who seemed interested was Corrina, a friendly acquaintance I had admired from a distance. Her proficiency in mountain biking, surfing, rock climbing, snowshoeing and probably five more sports was slightly intimidating, in addition to her long, black hair and muscular arms. I cautiously asked if she was up for this adventure. She had never been bikepacking but said yes.

I drove to pick her up in the predawn. We touched the salty water, at Mad River Beach, our foggy mindset matching the weather, rode back along West End Road to my house which was conveniently en route, and sat on our back steps petting my neighbor's cute dogs while my husband brought out espresso. We left before we nullified our early start, sleeping bags strapped to handlebars, and pedaled up. Up, up, up we went for most of the day, toward Horse Mountain. I invited the fog to linger as long as it wanted to. After we popped out of it, the heat was on. We traveled up Bald Mountain Road and ran into an old coworker of mine, a forester who coordinates logging operations and is always pleasantly chatty. Amidst the dusty and dirty traffic of logging trucks, he joined us in a turnout for lunch, the dust coating each of our sandwiches equally.

Corrina's steeper gears forced her to charge the hills and I was impressed, but not surprised. We eventually reached Forest Service 1 (FS-1) and filtered creek water into our bladders and bottles until they were bulging. We forced our legs to go a little farther than they wanted and, after 50 miles and 8,000 feet of climbing, we found a camp spot hidden from the road. Conversation flowed easily over pesto pasta and, as we got to know each other more, I felt like I was making a lasting friend with whom I could share the memory of this painful quest for a mountain top and still laugh about it. We both brought thick sleeping bags for the fickle and chilly weather at this elevation, but no tent to save on weight. The night stayed warm while we sweated in our bags, with bugs buzzing in our ears like the little devils they are.

In the gilded dawn, we felt the weight of the day's task and the time of dusk. Even in these long days of sunshine, we both felt a sense of urgency. We cycled on the heart-rate monitor-shaped hills of FS-1, sampling ripe berries and remaining cautious on the potentially catastrophic potholed descents. On a steep uphill, I heard a familiar voice say, "Glad to see you in your native habitat!" It was my old neighbors, Jared and Yana, also foresters, on their annual pilgrimage to Hyampom for firewood. I hadn't seen them in ages and was delighted. We caught up on the happenings since COVID started and stopped traffic (Jared's dad in the pickup behind them) while we chatted. Their encouragement put a pep in my step and I caught up to Corrina, my hands and face stained from the berries.

After seven or one million climbs along the ridge, we descended onto State Route 36 headed east and the heat came for us. It was like descending into a blow dryer on low, the dry heat pulsing mercilessly. Dizzy and woozy, my stomach flipped its switch to nausea. Drunk with this fever-weather, we wove to Mad River Burger Bar. That the stand was out of ice cream seemed criminal and made me sadder than is appropriate for an adult. We stared at each other over fries and cokes, both too hot to eat or talk much.

We swung a left onto Van Duzen River Road as its black asphalt baked us and bathed us in sticky tar smells, and at one point I stopped for no reason. Corrina asked what was wrong and all I could say was, "I just need to not pedal for a moment. I feel like we are never going to get there." We ached to swim in the river but stubbornly forced ourselves to continue, knowing we might be pressed for time. We ditched as much gear as we could at the base of the final gravel climb, ignorant of the brutality awaiting us. My saddle sores were getting the best of me. Corrina was also near her limit, and we inched forward from one patch of shade to another, like puddle jumping minus the fun.

With great relief, we reached the trail. I felt like I could walk forever if I could just get my bum off that seat. We stashed our bikes in the bushes and hiked 1 mile to the summit. I wore my helmet to shield my eyes from the lowering sun and scratched my legs on the bushes as we scrambled our way up, Corrina navigating. At 6:30 p.m. we reached Signal Peak, marked by a crumbling pillar. We absorbed the 360-degree view and felt the lightness of body and satisfaction of mind that comes from reaching a goal. Back at the trailhead, Tom's waiting truck was our return ticket and we regaled him with the mishaps and adventure on the drive home. Then we plotted our next sea-to-summit for the following weekend, an arduous undertaking to Salmon Mountain — that one I had already found on the map.

Eureka Salmon Finally Show Up

By Kenny Priest

fishing@northcoastjournal.com

If the last couple days are any indication, we may have a strong finish to the salmon season out of Eureka. Since the opener June 29, the fishing — and subsequently the effort — have both been underwhelming. But things began to change Saturday. A couple charters and sport boats braved tough conditions and found some nice kings 5 miles north of the entrance. This is exactly what we've been waiting on. After sitting out Sunday due to rough seas, Tim Klassen of Reel Steel Sport Fishing and Gary Blasi of Full Throttle Sport Fishing found enough hungry kings Monday to make a solid day. "The salmon were off of Mad River on the 55-line Monday in 230 feet of water," said Klassen. "The fish were scattered and you had to look around for patches of bait. There wasn't much to key on but there were some nice fish in the mix. They averaged from 7 pounds all the way to 23 pounds," said Klassen. Nice weather is forecast for the rest of the week, so expect the fleet to apply a full-court press on the salmon grounds. The season will come to a close after Sunday.

Weekend Marine Forecast

Calmer winds and seas will most likely persist through the week. Friday's forecast is calling for winds 10 to 15 knots out of the north and northwest waves 4 feet at six seconds. Saturday is calling for north winds 5 to 10 knots and waves out of the north 4 feet at six seconds. Sunday's forecast is similar, with winds out of the northwest 5 to 10 knots and waves northwest 5 feet at 6 seconds. These conditions can and will change by the weekend. For an up-to-date weather forecast, visit www.weather.gov/eureka/ or www.windy.com. To monitor the latest Humboldt bar conditions, visit www.wrh.noaa.gov/eka/swan. You can also call the National Weather Service at 443-7062 or the office on Woodley Island at 443-6484.

Junior Angler Fishing Day

Saturday, Aug. 7, there will be a Junior Angler Fishing Day held at Freshwater Lagoon Beach for anglers 16 and younger. Loaner fishing equipment is available for those that need it (available on a first-come-first-served basis). Get a Junior Angler program/booklet with which kids can earn a fishing badge, free stickers and other giveaways. Limited to 40 participants who need to be accompanied by an adult. Sign up is required. Call 465-7762 or emailing redw_volunteer@nps.gov.

Sport Crab season coming to a close

The 2021 sport Dungeness crab season in Humboldt, Mendocino and Del Norte counties will close Friday July 30. The season is expected to reopen Nov. 6.

The Oceans:

Eureka

With the season closing after this weekend, the salmon action is finally starting to heat up. Schools of kings were located off the Mad River Saturday in 230 feet of water and boats were back in that general area on Monday. There were some salmon up to 23-pounds caught.

Trinidad

The salmon bite dipped a little Tuesday according to Tony Sepulveda of Shellback Sport Fishing. "Prior to Tuesday, limits were had just about each day," said Sepulveda. "There's a big area of fish from a little north of Patrick's Point all the way to Reading Rock. And there's some nice ones in the mix with some over 20 pounds."

Shelter Cove

According to Jake Mitchell of Sea Hawk Sport Fishing, the salmon fishing has been sporadic. He said, "Some days have been really good and the next will be pretty tough. Overall, there are fish to be had, if you're willing to work at it. The grade has been excellent but there are a lot of silvers in the mix as well. Most of the effort has been in close from the moorings down to White Rock. The rock fishing has been awesome but the lingcod were pretty tough to come by last week." Big fish honors for the week went to John Neil, who boated a 30.5-pound king last Thursday.

Crescent City

When they can get out, anglers are finding a few salmon. According to Britt Carson of Crescent City's Englund Marine, the best bite is still between Round Rock and the green can in 100 feet of water. "The fish are close to the bottom, coming at 80 feet on the wire," said Carson. "The California halibut bite really picked up this week along South Beach. Trollers as well as anglers fishing from the rocks are getting a few each day. The rockfish and lingcod bite continues to be excellent. South Reef and the Sisters are a couple of the popular spots."

The Rivers:

Lower Klamath

The estuary fishery has been up and down all week and varying from tide to tide. It will likely be this way until we see the first big push of fall salmon enter the river. Spring-run regulations are in effect through Aug. 14, with a daily bag and possession limit of one salmon of any size. ●

Back at it Again?

By Collin Yeo

music@northcoastjournal.com

To mask or not to mask, that is the question. Whether tis nobler in the mind to suffer a mild inconvenience to ... oh, stop it. It looks like the numbers are climbing and the governor — with a recall election looming that he might want to take a tad more seriously lest we all have to suffer Larry Elder weaponizing identity in the most cynical way possible to break a gubernatorial glass ceiling in the worst way possible — might be bringing back more restrictive mandates. Indoor masking is one thing, I don't mind it and neither do you, unless you're a crank. I actually find it nice to have a little cover for my barely controlled and constant stream of rude public commentary. But if we go into a further lockdown, this column goes away and makes me sad, so let's try not to mess this up again. And while I believe that Newsom will likely do anything to avoid another lockdown given its political unpopularity, recall politics don't change the number of infections and the county officials will do whatever they deem necessary to keep the hospitals emptier. And I have some discretion here, too, insofar as my column goes. I'm not going to tell people to replicate The Masque of the Red Death with an EDM show in place of Prince Prospero's doomed ball. Not if I can help it, anyway. All this is messy, none of it is black and white, and a complicated moral calculation is the best way to describe the situation. As I recently told an estranged relative who will not stop sending me unsolicited anti-vax posts: No, I am not a slave to "Big Pharma," nor am I a fan of the American government. I don't like Procter and Gamble either, but I still wash my hands with the municipally provided soap when I use a public toilet. And having known people who died of this evil crud, I took whatever risk there was and I got the jab ASAP. Thankfully my side-effects were minimal. I know that it's not a guarantee from infection but it's the best I've got to work with at present. No, I am not gleeful when anti-vax people get sick, just as I would hope for the same restraint from the other side if I happen to incur illness despite my precautions. And we left it at that.

Do the best you can and have a great week.

Thursday

Here's a nice outdoor event that even the most gig-shy among us can enjoy. Claire Bent and Citizen Funk is one of those durable, soul-drenched groups whose covers-friendly sets are tight, delightful in their arrangements and, most of all, fun. The musicians inhabit a certain perfect space for a group like this, with flawless renditions of familiar songs done with enough personal style that the band truly has its own sound.

And the less said about Claire's vocals the better — no, I'm not trying to insult her, far from it — what I am saying is that her fantastic pipes speak for themselves. Anything I try to add here will only be a pale shadow of the real deal. I can't imagine a nicer band to enjoy in a park on a summer evening, and that evening is tonight at 6 p.m., that Park is Pierson, and the price is right: free.

Friday

If you can handle an indoor dance thing that's likely to be populated by lots of young people from all over, then the Arcata Theatre Lounge is your destination tonight. I am reporting on this show with the usual caveat that I am assuming, in the spirit of charity, that my readers are smart enough to be fully vaccinated and follow mask protocols when applicable. That's what my doctor told me would keep me out of the hospital and I tend to defer to him for this sort of info rather than Facebook posts by estranged relatives that draw a chilling connection between the Delta variant, 5G, chemtrails and the Chinese Communist Party. Anyway, there's a Tropicali Showcase tonight at 9 p.m. ($10). What does that mean? Well, it means a lot of local rap and reggae flavored acts are going to be spinning and rhyming through the night, including Ishi Dube, Eli Fowler, Mika Sun, G. Davis, DJ Just One and, of course, The Tropicali Crew.

Saturday

Following an emerging tradition of having electrically amplified stringed bands on its stage for weekend shows, the Siren's Song has a hard rock special tonight. Local heavies War Möth will be sharing the timbers with Insomnia Syndrome, who are not, as far as I can tell, named after what happens when I go down a YouTube wormhole about bees or the CIA. Music starts at 8:30 p.m. ($10). If you have been itching for a nice loud one with the heavy drums and distorted guitars that out-volume the intrusive thoughts, this one's for you.

Sunday

One of the cool things about putting "dead" in your band name is that after you die, the music will still seem fresh. And if you add "grateful" to the beginning? Well, buddy, you've got a recipe for posthumous appreciation-bordering-on-worship that would make the pharaohs of ancient Kemet jealous. Are you telling me that a dead guy made this? Cool! This is almost the case anyway, as local tribute act Grateful Getdown is getting together at Humbrews at 6 p.m. to celebrate what would have been the 79th birthday of one Jerome John "Jerry" Garcia, who I am told was an influential guitarist of some note in a well-known San Francisco counter culture band ($10). And while I don't love the neckties and non-fungible tokens associated with the late master, I have no issue with people keeping his extensive songbook alive. ●

A Spark in Nothing

An outdoor movie night under the stars awaits you in Redway at the KMUD Summer Movie Night, Friday, July 30 at 6 p.m. Bring a blanket and lawn chair and enjoy family-friendly silent short films by Charlie Chaplin before the feature film, A Spark in Nothing, by local filmmaker Griffin Lock. While you're there, bid on the silent auction and enjoy a dinner of Buffalo wings, baked potatoes, salads, popcorn and treats, plus non-alcoholic spritzers, blended drinks and beer. Sounds like a grand evening.

So, you're vaccinated and taking in a live classical concert is at the top of your Liszt? You're in luck. Trinity Alps Chamber Music Festival returns to the Trinity Alps Performing Arts Center in Weaverville on Saturday, July 31 at 7:30 p.m. (donation) for an evening of musical delights from festival director Ian Scarfe, who will perform a program of classical works for solo piano on the 96-year-old Chickering concert grand piano. Nice. Scarfe will be in Eureka on Sunday, Aug. 1 at 2 p.m. at Morris Graves Museum of Art performing Haydn, Beethoven, Chopin, Liszt, Gershwin and Barber ($20 suggested donation).

Live theater ... to see, or not to see? If you choose the former, get thee to the North Coast Repertory Theatre for its production of Hamlet, opening Saturday, July 31 at 8 p.m. and playing Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays through Aug. 22 ($18, $16). In tragic Shakespearean fashion, the play was shut down due to the pandemic just as it was about to open in 2020. The cast and crew persevered and are back with flourish. Get tickets online in advance at www.ncrt.net or by calling 442-6278, as none will be sold at the theater. Proof of vaccination or recent negative COVID test is required at the door.

My current level of COVID comfort. F9

The Wild Ride to F9

Two decades, no brakes

By John J. Bennett

screens@northcoastjournal.com

F9: THE FAST SAGA. The thrill isn't gone, per se, but in having recently revisited the undeniable high-water mark of installments four through six — Fast & Furious (2009); Fast 5 (2011); Fast & Furious 6 (2013) — of this almost ridiculously long-lived franchise, this unlikely behemoth that was never really meant to survive, I have to say the seams may be starting to show.

Did I enjoy myself, long after its premier, even after all these weeks of dissipation and possible spoilers? Of course, I did. But the exhilaration has grown tempered, both as the running times of the movies approach territory heretofore only trod upon by epics and as the series has stretched to continue to outdo itself in terms of scale and spectacle.

To show my age, I've been participating in this silliness from the beginning. The Fast and the Furious (2001) was a delightful B-movie throwback I probably rented at a Blockbuster. The weird charm of the cast, the unblinking seriousness of the movie's tone and the overarching sense of adventure created an unlikely but highly enjoyable document of a specific place in time. The sequel 2 Fast 2 Furious (2003), long my wife's favorite installment, felt like the franchise was already on fumes, but succeeded by ramping up the pulpiness and introducing us to scenery-devouring Roman Pearce (Tyrese Gibson).

The real shift occurred while fewer people were looking, though, when a young director named Justin Lin took a property now absent any of its principal cast, went to Japan (The Fast and the Furious: Tokyo Drift, 2006) and set in motion a mind-boggling, money-minting series of events that would redefine the notion of sequels for a new era. With his keen eye, precise pacing and mastery of atmosphere, Lin reinvented the aesthetic of the series, bringing an elevated sense of craft to the proceedings. He was also able, with broad-minded screenwriting collaborators, to bring home the wayward stars-to-be who had previously defined the tone of the movies.

The next three, referenced above, demonstrated there is no ceiling and each was/is arguably the defining action movie of its given year, replete with mega-stars and unparalleled action set pieces. Furious 7 (2015), in the hands of the venerable James Wan, marks the transition to late-stage, beyond-beyond re-upperry. Sumptuous, sexy and ludicrous, 7 is true to the tone of its predecessors but also on its way to something quite apart (to be fair, this transition started a couple of movies prior, but this feels more like the real jumping-off point). Since then, well, we've had submarines breaking through ice fields, global internet espionage and, now, trips to space. We've come a long way from hijacking 18 wheelers in the Inland Empire. One can't help but wonder whether the death of Paul Walker during the production of 7 (in an un-sanctioned sports car crash on a public street) left more creative control in the hands of co-star and producer Vin Diesel (who has long seemed bent on world domination), but I suppose I'll never know.

To circle back, we're now nine movies in, with Lin back at the helm. The movie opens with a quasi-origin story, taking us back to the 1989 on-track incident that killed Dominic Toretto's (Diesel) father and set Dom on the path of a career criminal (with a heart of gold, of course). In the present day, Dom and Letty (Michelle Rodriguez) have settled down on a remote farmstead (inexplicable) to raise young Brian, Dom's son with the late Elena (Elsa Pataky), ruthlessly murdered by Cipher (Charlize Theron) just one movie ago. But, of course, the quiet life doesn't make for much of a two-and-a-half-hour action epic. And so enters the team — Roman, Tej (Chris "Ludacris" Bridges) and Ramsey (Nathalie Emmanuel) — with news about a CIA operation gone wrong and a downed aircraft carrying secret cargo. You know, the usual. The band is back together, marauding across some war-torn Central American nation in a collection of delightfully silly vehicles (Letty has become something of a motocross ace, apparently). The team's recovery mission is foiled by a long-lost family member, after which they are rejoined by Mia (Jordana Brewster) and spread out across the globe to track down the villains and beloved associate thought dead. Meanwhile, more and more of Dom's history plays out in flashbacks.

It's all too much but that's kind of the point, isn't it? While I intermittently longed for some of the simpler magic of the earlier movies, I'm still a sucker for all this nonsense. I was troubled only briefly by the notion that all our beloved protagonists have become highly proficient killers (Dom dispatches maybe 20 faceless baddies in one fistfight) and that Roman's growing belief that they are all somehow invincible didn't get a proper payoff. But I knew what I was getting into; while F9 may not be the best in the series, it is certainly a work of logical progression. PG13. 145M. BROADWAY. ●

Twin Souls: S.S. Emidio and Bessie the Blimp

By Barry Evans

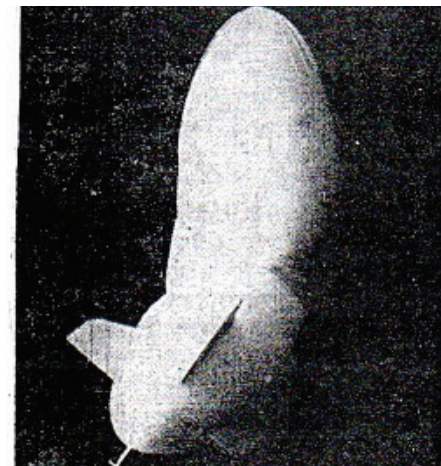

fieldnotes@northcoastjournal.com

Something about Blunt's Reef, a jagged shard of rock three miles off Cape Mendocino, seems to breathe new vitality into otherwise lifeless craft. How else can you explain that, within a six-year period, two ships — one seaborne, one airborne — found new life there after being abandoned by their crews? It all happened long ago, during and immediately after World War II, but it's a pair of tales worth repeating here.

The United States declared war on Japan on Dec. 8, 1941, one day after the attack on Pearl Harbor, "the date which will live in infamy," as President Franklin Roosevelt put it in his speech to the nation. Twelve days later, the 7,000-ton tanker S.S. Emidio was en route from Seattle to San Pedro laden with ballast. Off Cape Mendocino, she was sighted by Japanese submarine I-17 and thus became the first victim of Japan's war in the Pacific. After being hit five times by shells from the sub's 5.5-inch deck gun, the Emidio crew started to abandon ship in lifeboats. Three men drowned when a shell hit a lifeboat and another two died when a torpedo fired from the I-17 exploded in the engine room. The 31 survivors out of the original crew of 36 made it to the Blunt's Reef lightship after rowing for 16 hours. A U.S. Coast Guard cutter then picked them up from the lightship and brought them to Eureka.

Meanwhile, despite her submerged stern, the Emidio stayed afloat, drifting north for several weeks until she ran aground on rocks off Crescent City and broke in two. The bow then drifted into Crescent City harbor, only to be salvaged for scrap in the 1950s. A nearby plaque, California Historical Landmark No. 497, commemorates the crewless ship.

Five years later, a 150-foot, L-type Navy

The Humboldt Times, Sept. 14, 1946, ran the story of Bessie together with an aerial photo of the crashed airship. The caption reads, in part, "At first, it was thought the entire blimp could be salvaged, but huge tears in the outer skin doomed the large craft."

blimp (or airship) had a similar reincarnation, this time, thankfully, with no loss of life. ZPK-99, "Bessie" to her friends, was returning south to the Mare Island Naval Base after completing an aerial photo mission near Crescent City. A mile off Cape Mendocino, she was caught in "a terrific downdraft." Despite the pilot's attempt to avert a crash by applying full throttle, the craft hit the water at an estimated 50 knots, throwing the pilot and co-pilot out of a smashed window, followed by six other men who were able to escape the blimp's gondola while it was still in the water. Now relieved of the weight of eight men, the blimp rose 50 feet into the air with three remaining crewmembers, who had the presence of mind (and courage) to jump into the water. Fortunately, a rancher saw the incident and called the Coast Guard, resulting in all 11 men being rescued by a raft from the nearby Blunt's Reef lightship.

Now crewless, Bessie apparently had a mind of her own. For the next three hours, she floated northeast, to finally "gently settle in a fold of the hills," according to the Humboldt Standard, watched by a crowd of Blue Lake residents. Not that gentle! The landing broke her in two when she hit trees and crashed into Minor's Quarry (owned by Isaac Minor, memorialized in the name of Arcata's 1914 theater) on Fickle Hill. By the time the USCG arrived on the scene that evening, looters had already made off with anything of value.

And that's how two plucky craft regained their élan vital after abandonment. Hearty thanks to Jerry Rohde for help with these two stories. ●

Barry Evans (he/him, barryevans9@yahoo.com) believes helium-filled airships have a glorious future.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS CONTRACTOR PREQUALIFICATION FOR: COMMUNITY CORRECTIONS RE-ENTRY RESOURCE CENTER PROJECT PROJECT #170223

Notice is hereby given that the County of Humboldt (COUNTY) has determined that all bidders on the Community Corrections Re-Entry Resource Project (Project #170223) to be undertaken by the COUNTY must be pre-qualified prior to submitting a bid on that project. The current estimate for the Project is approximately $20,000,000. No bid will be accepted from a Contractor that has failed to comply with the requirements of this NOTICE TO BIDDERS.

Copies of the Contractor Prequalification Packet for the Community Corrections Re-Entry Resource Project, #170223 are available for download from the County's website at: <https://humboldt.gov/Bids.aspx?bidID=377>. Contractors are responsible for monitoring this website for addendums to the Prequalification Package and answers to timely submitted questions. The Prequalification Package may also be seen at Humboldt County Department of Public Works, 1106 Second Street, Eureka, California. The COUNTY makes no guarantees and assumes no responsibility for information obtained from and errors that may exist in copies of the Prequalification Package retrieved from any other source.

Contractors shall possess a California Class B license to bid as the Prime Contractor on this project. It is mandatory that all Contractors who intend to submit a bid, fully complete the Application for Prequalification (included in this Prequalification Packet), provide all materials requested therein, and be approved by the County of Humboldt to be on the final pre-qualified bidders list. No bid will be accepted from a Contractor that has failed to comply with these requirements. If two or more business entities submit a bid as part of a Joint Venture or expect to submit a bid as part of a Joint Venture, each entity within the Joint Venture must be separately qualified to bid. The last date to submit a fully completed questionnaire is 5:00 p.m. on August 5th, 2021 (8/5/21). Contractors are encouraged to submit their completed Application for Prequalification as soon as possible to allow the COUNTY, at their sole discretion, to notify Contractors of omissions of information to be remedied, and notify Contractors of their pre-qualification status in advance of the bid advertisement for this project.

Answers to questions contained in the attached questionnaire, information about current bonding capacity, notarized statement from surety, and the most recent reviewed or audited financial statements, with accompanying notes and supplemental information, are required. The COUNTY will use these documents as the basis of rating Contractors in respect to the size and scope of contracts upon which each Contractor is qualified to bid. The COUNTY reserves the right to check other sources available. The County of Humboldt's decision will be based on objective evaluation criteria.

The COUNTY reserves the right to adjust, increase, limit, suspend or rescind the pre-qualification rating based on subsequently learned information. Contractors whose rating changes sufficient to disqualify them will be notified and given an opportunity for a hearing consistent with the hearing procedures described below for appealing a pre-qualification rating.

While it is the intent of the pre-qualification questionnaire and documents required therewith to assist the County of Humboldt in determining bidder responsibility prior to bid and to aid the COUNTY in selecting the lowest responsible bidder, neither the fact of pre-qualification, nor any pre-qualification rating, will preclude the COUNTY from a post-bid consideration and determination of whether a bidder has the quality, fitness, capacity and experience to satisfactorily perform the proposed work, and has demonstrated the requisite trustworthiness.

One original and 3 copies of the Application for Prequalification shall be submitted to the address below. Digital copies and electronic submissions via email will not be accepted. The pre-qualification applications should be submitted under seal and marked "CONFIDENTIAL: PREQUALIFICATION SUBMITTAL PACKAGE FOR PROJECT #170223 – TIME SENSITIVE" to:

Humboldt County Department of Public Works
Attn: Thomas K. Mattson, Director
1106 Second Street
Eureka, CA 95501

The pre-qualification applications (questionnaire answers and financial statements) submitted by Contractors are not public records and are not open to public inspection or public review. All information provided will be kept confidential to the extent permitted by law. However, the contents may be disclosed to third parties for purpose of verification, or investigation of substantial allegations, or in the appeal hearing. State law requires that the names of contractors applying for pre-qualification status shall be public records subject to disclosure, and the first page of the questionnaire will be used for that purpose.

Each questionnaire must be signed under penalty of perjury in the manner designated at the end of the form, by an individual who has the legal authority to bind the Contractor on whose behalf that person is signing. If any information provided by a Contractor becomes inaccurate, it is the Contractor's responsibility to immediately notify the COUNTY and provide updated accurate information in writing, under penalty of perjury. Any information that is determined to be incorrect will lead to disqualification of Contractor before or after bidding.

The COUNTY reserves the right to waive minor irregularities and incidental omissions in the information contained in the pre-qualification application submitted. The COUNTY also reserves the right to make all final determinations, and to determine at any time that the pre-qualification procedures will not necessarily be applied to future public works projects.

Contractors may submit completed Applications for Prequalification via mail or delivery service during regular working hours on any day that the offices of the Humboldt County Department of Public Works is open, to the address above. Contractors who submit a complete Application for Prequalification will be notified of their qualification status no later than ten (10) calendar days after receipt by the COUNTY.

The COUNTY may refuse to grant pre-qualification where the requested information and materials are not provided, or not provided by 5:00 p.m. on August 5th, 2021 (8/5/21). There is no appeal from a refusal for an incomplete or late application, but re-application for a later project will be permitted. The closing time for bids or the acceptance of bids will not be changed in order to accommodate supplementation of incomplete submissions, or late submissions.

Where a timely and completed application results in a rating below that necessary to pre-qualify, an appeal can be made. An appeal is begun by the Contractor delivering notice to the County of Humboldt of its appeal of the decision with respect to its pre-qualification rating, no later than 5:00 pm on the fifth calendar day following the day on which the notice of prequalification determination. Without a timely appeal, the Contractor waives any and all rights to challenge the decision of the County of Humboldt, whether by administrative process, judicial process or any other legal process or proceeding.

Upon notice of disqualification, the Contractor will be notified of the basis for the prospective bidder's disqualification and provided with any supporting evidence that has been received from others or adduced as a result of an investigation by the COUNTY. If the Contractor gives the required notice of appeal and requests a hearing, the hearing shall be conducted so that it is concluded no later than ten (10) calendar days after the COUNTY's receipt of the notice of appeal, and no later than five (5) business days prior to the last date for the receipt of bids on the project. The hearing shall be an informal process conducted by a panel to whom the County has delegated responsibility to hear such appeals (the "Appeals Panel"). The Director of Public Works shall appoint, prior to commencing the prequalification process, three or more public employees, who have expertise regarding projects similar to this project, to serve as the Appeals Panel. The Contractor will be given the opportunity to present information and present reasons in opposition to the rating. Within two (2) business days after the conclusion of the hearing, and barring any external unforeseen conditions, the Appeals Panel will render its decision. It is the intention of the COUNTY that the date for the submission and opening of bids will not be delayed or postponed to allow for completion of an appeal process.

Note: A contractor may be found not pre-qualified for bidding on a specific public works contract to be let by the COUNTY, or on all contracts to be let by the COUNTY until the contractor meets the COUNTY's requirements. In addition, a contractor may be found not pre-qualified for either:

Fredrick Mordecai Gold

July 31, 1936 - February 1, 2021

Fredrick Mordecai Gold, born in Brooklyn New York on July 31, 1936, died at 84 years of age in the house he built in Eureka California, surrounded by loved ones, on February 1, 2021. He is dearly missed. He passed after a short and courageous fight with cancer. He beat it 3 previous times, but it won in the end. He told us that he was not afraid or sad to die, saying that he had had a good life, but was worried and sad for those he was leaving behind. We are grateful that the end was quick and mostly painless, due to the outstanding efforts of Humboldt County Hospice. Fred was very happy to have been able to stay in his home and be with loved ones until the end. He was able to do this for his father Philip before him, and we were fortunate to be able to do the same for him.

Fred was born to Phillip and Minerva, their third child, Jay and Joan preceding him. He is survived by his brother Jay and partner Susan, his sister Joan, his sons Aaron and Jordan, his nieces Mercedes, Barbara, and Laura, his nephew Fernando, his partner Carolyn and his ex-wife Maggie.

Fred spent his early life in Brooklyn, New York, and graduated from Erasmus Hall High School in 1955, after which he joined the Navy and served aboard the U.S.S Ticonderoga. He earned an Associate in Arts Degree from Santa Monica City College in 1972, after which he moved to Eureka and attended Humboldt State University earning a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1974.

Prior to moving west from New York, Fred and his father owned a small business on Flatbush Avenue in Brooklyn where they sold antiques and made and restored furniture. During this time he was married and had his two sons. Fred was a highly skilled artist and craftsman and was amazingly capable in many forms and media, though woodworking was where his talent really shone, especially regarding creating artwork using the wood lathe. He created many bracelets and bowls that are cherished by his family and friends. He built furniture and several small boats. During his last years, he grew interested in building wooden bows, and like most things he set his mind to during his life, he was successful in building some beautiful bows which he happily used in his backyard. Fred was also passionate and accomplished at gardening and cooking. He enjoyed both during his 30 years or so of retirement from the Teamsters union, which he joined during his years of driving a concrete delivery truck. Few things made him happier than sharing a meal with friends or family, especially his friend Carolyn, whom he had dinner with almost every night for decades.

Fred's ashes will be interred next to his father's in a plot overlooking the ocean in Trinidad. Donations in his name may be sent to the American Cancer Society. We will keep you in our hearts forever Fred. Rest in peace.
